EX-GOV. RAMSDELL

Died At His Home In Nashua, Friday.

He Had A Shock Of Apoplexy On Wednesday

State Loses A Man With A Most Honorable Record.

NASHUA, N. H., Nov. 16—Former Governor George A. Ramsdell died at his home in this city at 4.20 o'clock this morning, from the effects of a apoplectic shock which he suffered on Wednesday. He was sixty-six years of age, and is survived by a wife and four children. Mr. Ramsdell's public career included ten years of service on the board of education, twenty years as trustee of the public library and many other places of trust and responsibility. In 1870, '71 and '72 he was a member of the legislature. In the republican gubernatorial convention of 1894, composed of nearly eight hundred delegates, he received a flattering vote and in the convention of '96 the distinguished honor was his of being nominated by acclamation. In the election that followed he was elected governor by one of the heaviest pluralities ever given a candidate in this state. Mr. Ramsdell has been identified with the temperance movement in New Hampshire. He was a director in the Wilton Railroad Co, the Peterboro Railroad Co. and the Jackson and Nashua cotton mills.

A GREAT OCCASION.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—Following the announcement that President McKinley will attend the celebration of Founder's day at the Union League, Philadelphia's famous republican club, comes the additional announcement that Governor Roosevelt, vice president elect, will also be a guest, as well as Secretaries Root, Hay, Wilson and Hitchcock, Attorney General Griggs and Postmaster General Smith. THE MOLINEUX CASE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—Assistant District Attorney Osborne, who handled the prosecution in the Molineux case, has given back to Recorder Goff all the papers in that celebrated case. Mr. Osborne has made several hundred suggestions for the shortening of the reading matter, so that the judges may draw their conclusions more readily. The attorney says the case will probably not reach the court of appeals until well into next year.

GRIGGS WILL RETIRE.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—At the cabinet meeting today, Attorney General Griggs made the formal announcement that on the fourth of March he will retire from the cabinet. Purely business reasons are responsible for this decision.

AWFUL PENALTY.

Colorado Boy Burned At The Stake.

He Was Charged With An Ugly Crime.

His Executioners Acted Deliberately, Unlike The Ordinary Mob.

LIMON, COLORADO, Nov. 16—Chained to a railroad rail, fixed firmly in the ground on the exact spot where his horrible crime was committed, young Preston Porter, Jr., (more familiarly called "John" Porter,) this evening paid a terrible penalty for assaulting and murdering little Louisa Frost. The child's mutilated body was discovered hidden among the bushes on the day after the deed. At just 6 23 o'clock the father of the murdered child touched a match to the fuel piled around the rail and twenty minutes later a last convulsive shudder of the victim's body told that life was extinct. What agony the boy suffered while his body was being shriveled in the fierce heat was expressed in his terrible contortions and the cries that he uttered from time to time His executioners, who numbered about three hundred of the men of Lincoln county, were not at all like the ordinary mob. Every act of theirs was deliberate, and during the preparations not an unnecessary word was spoken. They stood grimly about until the flames had completed the work and then quietly came back to Limon, thence returning to their homes.

BRITISH GARRISON BESIEGED.

LONDON, Nov. 17, 3 A. M.—"The Vryheid garrison is practically besieged," says the Pietermaritzburg correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, wiring on Thursday, "and the town is evacuated. A position has been taken up on the hills commanding the town and notices have been posted in the surrounding country warning the Boers that if they attempt to occupy the town, it will be blown up."

KALAMAZOO, MICH., Nov. 16.—The story of a horrible grave yard robbery at Spring Brook cemetery in Nedeyago county proves false. The officials here deny the report emphatically.

TO REDUCE WAR TAXES

Representative Dalzell Begins Work For Committee.

TASK DIFFICULT AND ARDUOUS.

Many Interests Clamoring For Reductions, but Aim Is to Relieve Greatest Number of Citizens—Uncertain Just How Cut Will Be Made.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The Republican members of the house committee on ways and means will meet on next Tuesday to prepare the framework of a bill amending the war revenue act in the direction of a reduction of taxes. This meeting is held in advance of the assembling of congress in order that a bill may be ready for the consideration of the full committee early in the session.

Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania, a prominent member of the committee, is now in the city and has been engaged for several days in procuring data from the treasury department showing the operation and effect of the war revenue act, which information he will compile and have ready for his colleagues when they meet.

Mr. Dalzell is of the opinion that there will be material reductions in the war taxes as the result of the committee's investigations, but to what extent and in what detail nobody can tell at this hour.

It will be necessary, he explains, to consult other branches of the government service before acting definitely. The war and navy departments must be taken into consideration to ascertain what is necessary for their support next year, the ordinary revenues of the government must be estimated and the demands of every branch accurately gauged so that no deficit in the aggregate revenues will be occasioned by the abolishing of a part of the war taxes.

Mr. Dalzell is sure that there will be no reduction in the tariff schedules, and the protected industries will not be touched in any way by legislation at this session of congress. In fact, there is no demand from any quarter for amendment of the tariff law. The schedules seem to be working beneficially to all concerned and certainly are producing the revenue expected by the framers of the Dingley law.

An Arduous Task.

The members of the ways and means committee who will frame the proposed bill reducing and abolishing the war taxes expect to have an arduous and harassing task. Great pressure will be brought from many directions for the abolishing of the tax upon certain items. It appears to be the intention of the committee to recommend reductions on schedules which apparently bear most vexatiously upon the greatest number of people.

The treasury tables show that the total receipts from the war revenue act from June 13, 1898, to June 30, 1900, were $211,144,288. Of this amount beer paid $66,548,107 and tobacco $31,333,256, with additional taxes on tobacco and beer of $976,104. Cigars paid $6,017,883 and cigarettes $2,762,313. The tax on legacies was $4,119,926, and what is known as special taxes paid $10,262,658.

Schedule A of the war revenue act produced $75,758,237. This schedule includes stamp taxes on bonds, certificates of stock, transfers, bills of sale, bank checks, promissory notes, money orders, foreign bills of exchange, bills of lading, express receipts, telegraphic messages and different classes of mercantile paper. Schedule B produced $9,838,364. This schedule includes medicinal and proprietary preparations. There also were miscellaneous taxes on snuff, mixed flour, etc.

Urgent demands for reduction of the war taxes have come from many sources. It will be the duty of the ways and means committee to weigh all the representations and make the reduction where it will afford the greatest relief to the largest number of citizens. The great trouble will be to satisfy the demands of the special interests affected. The committee at the last session received representations from many of the interests affected by the war tax as to its operations upon their especial lines of business, and these have been collated carefully for use. Undoubtedly it will be necessary to have numerous hearings before the committee at which persons who feel they have grievances may present them and show cause why reductions should be made in their particular cases.

One of the most burdensome features of the war revenue act, it is alleged, is the tax on express, freight and steam ship receipts and on telegrams. The Merchants' association of New York city has made a vigorous demand for an amendment of the law relating to express receipts, declaring that it is a burden upon small dealers and upon merchants delivering small packages and low value goods to out of town customers.

These Are Complaining.

The Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange of New York city has protested against the tax on transactions in certificates. It is said that the tax on this and other exchanges amounts to about $5,000,000 a year. Inequalities in the system also are complained of. For instance, the sale of 100 shares of the stock of a certain national bank involves $450,000, and the tax is $2. The sale of 100 shares of mining stock may involve only $150, and the tax is $2.

The room traders in the Stock Exchange say they are taxed unjustly and out of all reason and that a trader who deals in 1,000 shares of stock a day will pay $6,000 a year in taxes.

The Retail Druggists' association, representing about 38,000 firms, asserts that of the amount involved in schedule B the retail druggists paid three-fifths of the tax and could not recoup themselves by increasing the retail price of the articles.

The beer brewers, who pay such a large sum, say they cannot get it back from the consumer, as the consumer would not stand an increase in the retail price of a glass of beer, and consequently they are compelled to make good the tax out of the normal profits of the business.

It is uncertain what classes of taxes will be affected by the proposed reduction. One solution which has been proposed is to reduce all the schedules pro rata, while still another is to abolish certain forms of the war tax altogether, leaving other schedules untouched. After the house prepares the bill and passes it the senate will have to take these for its consideration, and it may be late in the session before final action is reached Monument Unveiled at Scranton.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 16.—Lackawanna county's tribute to her heroes of the civil war, a massive $50,000 memorial shaft, was unveiled yesterday with appropriate ceremonies. The miserable weather materially interfered with the attendance of participants and spectators, but withal it was an elaborate celebration. The parade was participated in by G. A. R. posts of Scranton and Wilkesbarre, Sons of Veterans, the children of the Soldiers' Orphan school at Harford, the Spanish war veterans and the Ninth and Thirteenth regiments, national guard of Pennsylvania. The monument stands on Courthouse square. It is 93 feet high, built of Barre granite, with bronze embellishments, and weighs 115 tons exclusive of the foundations. Over $5,000 was expended in building pillars in the old mine workings beneath the monument to insure a solid foundation, while a cylinder of solid masonry 35 feet in diameter and 35 feet deep directly supports the shaft.

Striking Cigar Makers Riot.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 16.—A mob of several hundred International union cigar makers fired on the factory of Gonzales Mora & Co. yesterday. The house was occupied by several hundred men, women and children belonging to Resistencia union, at work. A demand was made by the International that these leave the factory. The demand was refused. Several hundred shots were fired into the building and the front riddled by bullets. No one was hurt. Since that time the city has presented a wildly excited condition, and the streets in the neighborhood of the cigar factories have been thronged with people. All of the factories in the city were practically closed on account of the disorder. No arrests were made for the rioting.

Removing Dewey Columns.

New York, Nov. 16.—A dozen men with pickaxes, crowbars and shovels appeared before the Dewey arch last evening. In a few minutes the laborers pulled away the heavy coating of staff around the base of the pedestal situated on the park side near Twenty-fifth street. A crowd collected around the men. Relic hunters by the score appeared, and each sought to obtain some section of the sculptured figure of "Victory" which ornaments the front of all the columns. The skeleton of the column was bare in a few minutes, and the woodwork was torn apart and laid on the sidewalk. The work was done under the direction of a foreman of the department of streets and highways.

Scandal at Stanford University.

Stanford University, Cal., Nov. 16.—Dr. Edward Ross, head professor in the department of economics and sociology at Stanford university, has resigned. The resignation caused quite a sensation in university circles, where Dr. Ross was extremely popular. In his formal letter of resignation he intimated that he was being forced out of the university by Mrs. Stanford, who had taken exceptions to statements made by him in his public addresses on sociological and economic questions. He further said that Mrs. Stanford was prompted by certain powerful persons and commercial interests in San Francisco.

Shipwrecked Crew Rescued.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—After floating on the ocean in a helpless condition on a sinking vessel for five days Captain Anderson and his crew of 14 hands of the Norwegian bark Highflyer have arrived here, having been rescued by the British steamer Georgian Prince, Captain Flett, from Hull. During the five days the crew was at the mercy of the waves they saw only two sails.

Guiteau's Widow to Wed Again.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—A license has been issued for the marriage of Mrs. Anne Dunmire and Enoch Allen. Mrs. Dunmire was the widow of Charles J. Guiteau, hanged for the assassination of President Garfield in 1882. Allen is her third husband.

Cigarette smoking in England dates back to 1844. The great impetus to its increased use was caused by the Crimean war of 1854-6, when numbers of military and naval officers adopted this method of smoking from the inhabitants of Russia, Turkey, Malta, the Levant and other parts of Europe.

FOUGHT FOR THE BOERS

Six Yankees and Forty-four Irishmen Back From War.

THE CHICAGO AMBULANCE CORPS.

They're Full of War Stories—Irishmen Dare Not Go to Ireland For Fear of Arrest—The Yankees Were Mostly Scouts.

New York, Nov. 16.—The members of the Chicago Irish ambulance corps sent out to aid the Boers in South Africa have arrived at quarantine on the steamer Trave from Bremen. The men were sent out to South Africa by the United Irish societies of Chicago and left New York on Feb. 15 last on board the steamer La Gascogne. They arrived in South Africa about April 30 and left the Boer army in the vicinity of Lourenco Marques, from whence they sailed for Triest and thence to Bremen. A delegation of members of Irish societies will meet them at the pier and escort them to the Vanderbilt hotel, where they will be tendered a banquet. A delegation headed by General O'Beirne, Vice President Buckley, ex-Minister Patrick Egan, Dr. R. P. O'Neil and P. J. Judge, the organizer of the movement, boarded the steamer at quarantine this morning.

The Irishmen had little to add to what is already known of the retirement of the Boers from the cities they held before the great army of Lord Roberts got into the field.

T. A. Belford of County Longford, Ireland, who, like most of his comrades, had been a long time in the Transvaal when the war broke out, said that the British, as a rule, treated their prisoners harshly and sometimes with cruelty. He declared that it would be a long time before the war would end. When Kruger left, this order was given to the Boers:

"Now that the old man has gone let the fighting begin."

Belford says that was the signal for the inauguration of relentless guerrilla fighting.

"Dynamite Dick's" Story.

The most interesting American in the lot was J. N. King of California, called "Dynamite Dick" and "The Lion Tamer." He has curly gray hair that falls down on his shoulders, and he looks like the scout of the old fashioned picture books. He was one of a force of 120 mounted Americans organized in Pretoria at the beginning of the war. They usually formed the rear guard of the Boers in retreat. After the British began pushing the Boers vigorously the American contingent, by order of General Botha, left the main body and went into Portuguese territory. Those who did not want to keep on fighting in the falling cause of the Boers went to Lourenco Marques.

King had charge of the dynamite train of the Boers and blew up bridges by order of his superiors. He also had charge of the destruction of 27 guns captured from the British.

The party reached Lourenco Marques on Sept. 28 and were put in jail a week for safe keeping. With more than 400 other foreign soldiers who had fought with the Boers, including the men of Blake's brigade, they were put aboard the Austrian Lloyd steamship Styria, which landed them at Triest on Oct. 20. Some of the Americans and Irish went to France, others to Bremen, and King and the men who got here last night went to Hamburg.

The Irishmen say that they are afraid to go to Ireland, as they feel pretty certain they would be thrown into prison by the British government. All the expenses of their trip to America were paid by the Boers. Every man had an honorable discharge from the Boer army.

King says that the Boers he was with were the finest fighters and the best shots he ever saw.

"They are a God fearing people," he said. "Their langers on Sundays reminded me of an American camp meeting. There was nothing but praying and hymn singing, with an occasional exhortation."

The 44 Irish and the six Americans will be examined at the barge office today. They will be taken to the Vanderbilt hotel by their Irish-American friends. They are all dead broke, but as they are strong and willing to work they doubtless will be permitted to land.

The Czar's Illness.

London, Nov. 16.—The impression exists in most European capitals that the illness of Emperor Nicholas is more serious than it is represented to be, but this is probably based upon knowledge that the czar's constitution is not strong and is little likely to resist a serious attack. In Copenhagen the illness is attributed to overwork in connection with the Chinese crisis, and there is also a suspicion that the hygienic conditions and water supply at Livadia may be faulty. The dowager czarina receives news by courier twice each day. Her departure from Fredensberg had been officially fixed for Nov. 26. Preparations have since been made for her to leave at any moment, and the fact that she has not started indicates that there is no immediate danger. It is feared, however, that even if no complications ensue the attack may be of long duration.

Chinese Atrocities.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 16.—Rev. C. H. Tjader of the Swedish Protestant mission in Peking, who arrived on the Empress of China, tells the story of the murder of Rev. G. McConnell, Mrs. McConnell, their little boy, the Misses E. Burton and S. A. King, Rev. John Young and Mrs. Young and a native servant. At Tsin-kiannan the little party, fleeing for their lives, were overtaken by 20 soldiers and a mob of coolies. The soldiers hacked the missionaries to pieces with their swords, the women being forced to look at the murder and mutilation of the men and the baby. The bodies were thrown on the road and were still in the dust seven days after the murder.

A Tomato Trust.

Cincinnati, Nov. 16.—Forty tomato growers, controlling almost the entire product of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, met here and raised the price of the vegetable 20 per cent over last year. They have formed an association and have fixed the price at 30 cents per bushel, pledging themselves to hold out for this price.

New York, Nov. 16.—James J. Jeffries of California has signed articles of agreement for fights with both Gus Ruhlin of Akron, O., and Tom Sharkey of Ireland. According to the stipulations the bout with Ruhlin is to take place first.

CHEAP ARMOR PLATE.

Secretary Long Wins Fight Against Steel Companies.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Secretary Long announces the conclusion of the long controversy over the price of armor plate for naval vessels and an agreement with the Carnegie and Bethlehem companies for Krupp armor at $420 a ton, with the possible addition of royalty fees making the maximum price $455.52 a ton. The amount of armor involved is the largest ever placed at one time by the government and is said to equal all the armor purchased by this government up to 1896. It covers the armor for 17 ships now in various stages of construction, including eight battleships, six armored cruisers and three protected cruisers.

The following official statement was given out concerning the agreement:

"The navy department has come to an agreement with the Carnegie and Bethlehem companies for Krupp armor of the first class amounting to 24,950 tons for $420 a ton. The Krupp process involves the Harvey patent, the validity of which is now under consideration by the courts, and it is further agreed that the government will assume in addition any liability for the Krupp process not exceeding £5, or $24.32, a ton for Krupp royalty and not exceeding the United States license fee of $11.20 for Harvey royalty. The maximum price to the government is therefore $455.52 a ton, subject to diminution in case of any reduction in the foregoing royalties.

"The bid of these companies for this class of armor was $490 and the price originally asked $545.

"The Midvale company some time ago withdrew their bid, but they would have been unable in any event to furnish armor in due season for the Maine class of battleships. Had they not withdrawn their bid it is probable that some arrangement might have been made for the distribution among the three companies of the manufacture of the armor other than that of the Maine class. Their bid, however, was of value in enabling the department to secure the above large reduction."

Admiral O'Neill, chief of the bureau of ordnance, said of the result:

"The agreement is most satisfactory. The terms are reduced not only to a reasonable point, but more than reasonable. We get armor cheaper than any country in the world. It is due not only to Secretary Long's able management of the matter, but also to the fact that the companies met him in a very reasonable spirit. It is only just that this should be understood."

Mountains on Fire.

New York, Nov. 16.—Word was received here that a dangerous fire was spreading along Bear hill and Highland lake, near Highland Falls. The fire started from a spark of a West Shore engine on Wednesday afternoon. In less than ten hours the flames had swept several miles back in the mountains. Icehouses and "shoots" fed the fire. At midnight on Wednesday the whole country seemed one continuous blaze. There has been no rain in the mountains since last April, and everything is dry.

Snow Three Feet Deep In Utica.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 16.—The fall of snow in this vicinity and northern New York is unprecedented for thus early in the season. There is a fall of three feet on the level along the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg railroad and drifts from four to ten feet deep. A train became stalled on the Watertown branch and finally was abandoned from Carthage to Utica. Last night trains were from two to three hours late, the earliest blockade by snow in the recollection of the oldest railroad men.

Three Negroes Lynched In Texas.

Jefferson, Tex., Nov. 16.—Three negroes who had been arrested by Sheriff Haywood for waylaying and attempting to kill a Mr. Stallcup here, were taken from the jail by unknown persons and hanged to the railroad bridge across Cypress bayou. The negroes had confessed to the crime. The mob that did the hanging overpowered the jailer and cut the telephone line so that the jailer could not communicate with the sheriff.

Nebraska Legislature Republican.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Assistant Secretary of War Meiklejohn last night wired from Omaha as follows: "Official count of Omaha and Douglas county has just closed, showing one Republican senator and seven representatives elected. This give us the organization of the house and senate, 72 votes on joint ballot, a constitutional majority of five."

Fire In Illinois Factory.

Geneva, Ills., Nov. 16.—Fire totally destroyed the plant of the Appleton Manufacturing company in this city. It is rated in the paint shop. The loss is $250,000. The company manufactured farm machinery.

CHINESE SITUATION.

Powers' Note Is Nearly Ready For Delivery.

London, Nov. 16.—The note of the powers to the Chinese plenipotentiaries will probably be ready to submit within ten days. This announcement was made at the conclusion of a meeting of the ministers on Tuesday. It is understood that all points under discussion have been practically agreed upon except minor phases of several of the most important questions. Concerning these points the ministers have cabled for instructions, which they expect to receive before the next meeting.

A Shanghai dispatch says that there are continued rumors of the projected transfer of the Chinese court to Chengtu, but it is said that the viceroy of the province of Sze-chuan objects to such an arrangement.

It is also rumored that a rebellion has broken out in the province of Kan-su. Chang Chi Tung, the Wu-chang viceroy, is said to be raising 100,000 troops and to have proposed to the Nankin viceroy that they should combine forces to oppose the allies, making the Yang-tse their base for operations against Shen-si.

Dr. Morrison, wiring to The Times from Peking Tuesday, says:

"The Tartar general commanding in the province of Sze-chuan has been nominated governor general of Manchuria in deference to Russia's invitation to China to resume the government of that territory under Russian protection.

"The Chinese peace commissioners have received a telegram from the empress dowager, dated Nov. 10, censuring their failure to prevent the dispatch of foreign punitive expeditions into the interior. The empress dowager continues to issue decrees appointing officials to office. She is unable to realize her position and has even appointed literary chancellors to conduct examinations in the provinces.

"Trustworthy dispatches from Newchwang assert that, despite their assurances that they will not loot the railway, the Russians are transferring material from the Shan-hai-kwan line across the river at Newchwang to the Russian Manchurian railway."

Tuan and Chwang Degraded.

Shanghai, Nov. 16.—An imperial edict was issued yesterday which deprives Princes Tuan and Chwang of all rank and offices and hands them over to the imperial clan court. They are to be closely confined while awaiting further punishment. Duke Lan is also deprived of his rank. In regard to Governor Yu Hsien, the notorious antiforeigner who was recently reported to have committed suicide by swallowing gold leaf, it is ordered in the edict that he shall be temporarily handed over to the clan court for punishment while awaiting banishment to the farthest borders of the empire, where he is to work on the roads.

FRENCH EXPRESS WRECKED

Thirteen Killed, Including Peruvian Minister.

Bayonne, France, Nov. 16.—The southern express was derailed at noon yesterday between St. Geoures and Saubusse, near Dax, about 33 miles northeast of Bayonne. The restaurant car was precipitated over an embankment. Thirteen persons were killed and 20 others injured seven seriously. Five passengers are missing.

The list of killed includes Senor J. F. Canevaro, Peruvian minister to France, and an attache of the Peruvian legation in Madrid.

The Italian envoy to the Spanish court to announce the succession of King Victor Emmanuel is believed to be among the missing.

The section of the line where the accident occurred is under repair, and the derailment is attributed to the great speed of the express.

The engineer says that the ground gave way under the locomotive, which sank in to the ballast. The restaurant car came into terrific collision with the tender and alone rolled down the embankment.

It was luncheon hour, and out of 34 passengers in the train 30 were at table.

The bodies were terribly mangled. One of the butlers of the restaurant car, who was slightly injured, became suddenly insane and walked to and fro amid the wreckage singing at the top of his voice.

The engineer and stoker, who were thrown into a field, had miraculous escapes.

Nicaragua Canal Concessions.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The minister from Nicaragua, Senor Don Luis Corea, arrived in Washington yesterday morning, after an absence of four months in Nicaragua, in which time he conferred with President Zelaya and the members of the cabinet concerning Nicaragua canal affairs and other subjects of interest to the two countries. He says that by a happy combination of circumstances the way now is clear of private concessions and border misunderstandings, so that direct governmental consideration of the waterway may be taken up. Senor Corea also brings word that he has just signed in the City of Mexico, acting as minister for Nicaragua, the first treaty between Mexico and Nicaragua for amity, commerce and navigation, covering 14 articles, and firmly uniting the bonds between these two countries.

The Cuban Convention.

Havana, Nov. 16.—The Cuban constitutional convention held a short session yesterday in the Marti theater and adjourned until today. The report of the committee on credentials sustained the election of all the delegates from the province of Havana. Some irregularities, the committee asserted, had been committed, and some votes had been thrown out, but not enough to change the general result. The report was laid upon the table for discussion today. The committee's findings with reference to the other provinces were accepted by the convention.

Fire on the Monterey.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 16.—Mail advices from the orient say a fire occurred aboard the United States monitor Monterey on Oct. 21. The flames came from the electric light room, and for a time it was feared they would spread to the magazine. The fire was checked, however, and the damage was small. Five of the crew who had gone below narrowly escaped suffocation.

British Garrison Besieged.

Cape Town, Nov. 16.—A correspondent of the Cape Times reports that 1,250 Boers are besieging a British garrison of 250 regulars at Schweizerreneke, in western Transvaal, and that Lord Methuen and Colonel Settle are believed to be going to the garrison's relief.

LONG ISLAND TIMBER.

Celebrated For Its Oak, Walnut, Butternut and Chestnut.

An interesting fact not generally known is that Long Island produces better working timber than any other part of the country. Its oak, walnut and butternut for furniture and indoor fittings outrank that of all other localities in beauty of grain and durability. Its poplar and whitewood are harder and heavier than the same wood produced in the western states.

Another wood worthy of note is the white oak. Like all the native woods, its grain is exceptionally handsome, taking all sorts of curls and waves, and its irregular lines strongly defined, producing a fine effect when polished.

Trees that have attained a great age are notably rich in marking, as was found in the Bryant oak, an immense tree on the poet's estate at Roslyn, which a few years ago was undermined by springs at its root.

The tree was stored away to season and preserved for the family's use, to be made into furniture. On learning that it had been a landmark for over a century and a favorite with many old residents, Miss Julia Bryant presented one of the long arms to an old friend and neighbor, who had the wood converted into small articles for library use, such as paper knives, penholders and inkstands. These were sold at fairs for the benefit of the Home For Friendless Children, a county institution that Mr. Bryant had been greatly interested in.

A wood not as well known or appreciated by shipwrights as it should be is the Long Island chestnut. It has proved more durable than white oak. The old sloop Idlewild, built over 30 years ago and always in commission, is timbered entirely with chestnut, and not an inch of this wood has needed attention.

Long Island is also noted for its yellow locust and black walnut, and there is none finer in any part of the country than those found on the north shore. An amateur geologist accounts for this by the fact that large amounts of silica are in the clay underlying the surface soil, and that doubtless this quality in their earth food gives Long Island timber its superiority in beauty and durability and explains the hardness so wearing to workmen's tools.—Brooklyn Eagle.

BOY VERSUS TIME.

It Was a Severe Test, but the Youngster Won the Battle.

You can nearly always bet your money on a boy. Boys know some things better than even the angels. In an important lawsuit at Clay Center a 12-year-old boy was on the stand and testified that he had spent just ten minutes in getting a bucket of water for his mother. The question of time was a vital one, and the opposing attorneys tried to rattle the boy. Finally one of them pulled out his watch and proposed to test whether or not the boy knew when ten minutes had elapsed. The opposing attorneys on the boy's side of the case strenuously objected to this test, for it is well known that nothing is harder than to sit still and gauge the passing of time. The judge ordered the test to be made, however, and after the courtroom clock had been stopped and every chance removed for the boy to play a sneak, the trial commenced. The stillness in the room became oppressive. Every watch was drawn and the eyes of the multitude rested upon the youngster, who chewed gum, swung his foot against the round of his chair and gazed placidly out over the benches as though the proceedings had mighty little interest for him.

Two, four, six minutes passed, and still he made no sign. Then the attorneys commenced to worry him. "Isn't time about up?" asked one of them. "Nope," sententiously responded the boy as he changed the cross in his knees. Seven and eight minutes passed. "Haven't you got that water pumped yet?" said the attorney in a tone which was intended to convey the belief that ten minutes had more than passed. "Reckon not," again replied the boy, and his own attorneys began to chuckle. Nine minutes passed and tick, tick, tick went the seconds toward the ten minute mark, and up to exactly three seconds before the limit when the boy drawled out, "I think I've got that water drawed." The people burst into applause, and after the trial, when the boy was asked to explain how he hit off the time so correctly, he replied, "Oh, I just sorter knowed, that's all."—Kansas City Times.

An Untold Story.

She is a maiden aunt who has ceased to hide her spectacles when a gentleman calls and likes to knit rather than be idle.

"Of course there's a romance in your life, auntie," declared her dashing niece the other day. "There's a romance in every woman's life. Now be good and tell me yours."

"It's nothing," and the kindly face blushed almost into youthfulness. "There was a very attractive young man with whom I had grown up. We had been thrown together a great deal, and before he started abroad to pursue his studies as an artist he came to spend the evening with me and take leave. I recall that we talked of everything that offered an excuse for talking until he rose to go.

"Then he took me by the hand. He faltered, turning red and then turning white. It seemed he could not speak then, and he took a nervous turn about the room. As he came back to me there was a steadier and more determined look in his grave blue eyes. Again he took my trembling hand in his strong grasp and pronounced my name"—

"Yes, auntie."

"Here father and your uncle entered unceremoniously, discussing some earthy matter of business. Manlike, they spread themselves out in front of the grate, talked to Hugh about his trip and remained there till he was gone."

"Oh, the horrid brutes!"

Thank you, dear. Now you can share the curiosity I have indulged so many years. If he had spoken, what would he have said?"—Detroit Free Press.

AN EDITORIAL DUEL.

HOW AN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER MAN "DOUBLED" IN CANADA.

A Lively War Between Rival Journals on the Subject of Annexation to the United States—After the Last Shot the Duelist Fled the Country.

Clinton J. Furbish, who for many years was a leading member of The Times editorial staff, began active newspaper work so long ago that it encroaches upon the field of ancient history, but the circumstances surrounding his journalistic debut are worth recording.

It occurred just after the great oil excitement which drove western Pennsylvania into a speculative frenzy and sent prices skyward. New oil wells were being discovered every day, and fortunes were made and lost in an hour. The development of the Pennsylvania oilfields had only begun when oil was discovered in Canada. A wild rush for the new speculative field ensued. Young Furbish had a little money and hastened to invest every dollar of it in Canadian leases. In a short time the "marvelous discovery of oil" in that territory fizzled out completely and the bottom dropped out of everything. Furbish was left in Canada to try to straighten out matters for himself and for several friends whom he had induced to enter the enterprise.

It took considerable time to do this, and in the meanwhile the young speculator found that bread and butter had become a serious problem. There were two afternoon dailies in the place. One day the editor of the conservative paper called upon young Furbish at his hotel.

"You undoubtedly are aware," he said, "that a lot of hot headed, irresponsible, ignorant politicians over here have started another agitation for annexation to the United States. Now, of course, that would be suicide for Canada. Being from the United States, you probably are in a position to speak intelligently from that standpoint. Can't you write a strong editorial for my paper tomorrow in opposition to the annexation movement?"

Furbish demurred. But his board bill was pressing and he must eat; so, half in desperation, he undertook his first newspaper work. The Bugle next day contained a double leaded editorial thunderbolt against annexation.

The author of it had barely had time enough to read his work over carefully in print and to felicitate himself upon his success as an anonymous writer when another visitor called to see him.

"I am Mr. Dobbs," the newcomer announced. "I am the editor and proprietor of The Bazoo. You probably are aware that there is a strong movement on foot here to further the annexation of Canada to the United States. The Conservatives are straining every nerve to stem the tide that is setting in against them. You know the United States side of this question better than we do over here. Why can't you write a strong editorial for my paper tomorrow in favor of annexation?"

The young man could and did. The next day the editor of The Bugle called upon him. The visitor was greatly excited. "See!" he cried, exhibiting a copy of The Bazoo. "Our shot took effect. It has stirred them up. They see that their cause is desperate and are dying hard. What we need now are a few more masterly charges like that of yesterday and they'll be utterly routed. Go for 'em, my boy. Take all the space you want, and I'll pay you well for your work."

It is needless to say, perhaps, that the next issue of The Bugle contained another double leaded plea for Canadian integrity. This brought another call from Editor Dobbs of The Bazoo. Dobbs was elated. "Have you read what that chump down the street has tried to say?" he asked. "Balderdash! Rot! A schoolboy could have done better than that. I tell you we've got 'em on the run. Go for 'em, my boy. Take all the space you want, and I'll pay you well for it."

During the next two weeks a journalistic duel to the death raged fiercely. Every day Furbish would tear to pieces in one paper the arguments he had previously set forth in the other. Excitement ran high. Everybody in town was discussing annexation, pro and con, and on every hand Furbish heard his own arguments used to defeat or to sustain other views which he had expressed.

It was a glorious fight, but the man who was solely responsible for it all at last made a most unwelcome discovery. His landlord was again pressing him for money, and the newspapers were paying him now in promises. At first he exacted pay for each day's work when the manuscript was handed in, but there soon came several lapses, and this speedily drifted into absolute suspension of payments. Of course as the payments became fewer the promises grew more frequent, but at last there came a day when Furbish found he could no longer pay a hotel bill with good intentions and diplomatic language. He needed money, pleaded for even a portion of what was due him and was again put off. Is it strange that he should have felt aggrieved when he had to pawn his watch and his trunk?

The next issue of The Bugle, as usual, contained a double leaded editorial over a column in length. So did The Bazoo. The two papers came out simultaneously, and both contained the same editorial word for word. In The Bugle it appeared under the headline "Annexation a Farce," while The Bazoo's caption was "Annexation the Hope of Canada."

Five minutes later two wildly excited editors, each clutching a newspaper in his hand, rushed into the office of the little Canadian hotel.

"Where's Furbish?" shouted one.

"Mr. Furbish has gone," said the clerk calmly.

"Gone?" echoed the other editor. "Gone where?"

"He left for New York this afternoon by way of Buffalo, I think," replied the clerk.

Two thunderstruck Canadian editors looked at each other a few moments in speechless amazement. Then they shook hands without saying a word, walked across the street and sat down together on a salt barrel in front of a grocery.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Changed His Mule's Name.

"I reckon," said the old colored man, "dat I better change de name o' dat mule."

"It doesn't make much difference about what you call a mule, does it?"

FRENCH INCIVILITY.

An English Lady's Sweeping Charge Against Gallic Manners.

French politeness, as we all know, has passed into a proverb. Yet, like many another proverb, it can only be accounted true in a rare and limited sense. When traveling in France, one is struck by the extreme rudeness of one's fellow travelers, who lose no time in making you as uncomfortable as possible, while it never occurs to any man to open the exceedingly awkward doors of a railroad carriage or to assist a lady in getting in and out. On one occasion I passed the Maison de Secours for cyclists, and asked the man in charge kindly to pump up one of my wheels, as I had no pump with me. He promptly declined on the score that I had no card of the touring club with me. In what desolate country lane of England, had one appealed to the veriest scorcher, would such a request have been bluffly and rudely refused?

The fact is that true politeness, the kindly feeling of man to man, or man to woman, is far more developed in the English lower classes than it is among the so called Gallic population. The manners of Parisian "cochers," "concierges" and officials have notably deteriorated since the advent of the republic, and any actual courtesy toward women consists only in words and the entirely meaningless fashion of lifting the hat. A Frenchman will always push and trample and shove past a woman, forcing her off the pavement and into the gutter, he will stare her out of countenance, and follow her in the street to her annoyance and discomfiture, but he will rarely extend a helping hand or take her under his manly and disinterested protection. When one remembers the admirable conduct of the British crowd in the streets on the night of the illuminations in honor of the jubilee, one cannot but feel proud of one's countrymen's manners, from the highest to the lowest. Politeness without protestation might be their motto.

The peculiarities of French and English people also exhibit themselves in other ways. For instance, a French chambermaid once informed me that she preferred her English guests. Why? I queried. "Because they have fixed habits," she replied. "Habits they have, such as daily baths, open windows and abundance of hot water, but once you know these habits they are every day the same. They rarely ever ring the bell, except at stated times, and you easily learn how to serve them. Now, the French visitors never like the same things two days running. Today they are too hot, tomorrow too cold; today they sleep propped up with pillows, tomorrow they like their heels higher than their heads, and so they are difficult, capricious, changeable and hard to please."—London Graphic.

His Political Career.

"Yes, I held a public office once," said the man in the mackintosh as he proceeded to light a cigar, and the other hastened to get to windward of him.

"Have a contract for sweeping it out?" queried the man with the green goggles.

"Somebody die and will it to you?" asked the man who had his feet on the table.

"You have never been in public life, either of you," he retorted. "That's all that ails you fellows. I don't mind saying either that my experience as an officeholder was not a pleasant one. I was nominated at a township convention against my will for the office of town clerk. I protested, but it didn't do any good. Some of the boys had put up a job on me, and they rushed the thing through with a whoop. I was not only nominated for the office, but I was elected. It's one of those little jobs, you know, that are a whole lot of trouble and mighty little profit. I served the term out, but it was really an injury to me. It took me away from my business. It made all sorts of bother, and I was glad enough to lay it down at the end of the term."

"What did the office pay?" inquired the man with the white spot in his mustache.

"It was worth $800 a year."

"Then what are you kicking about?"

"It was really worth $800 a year, I say, but the actual salary, all fees included, was only $40. That's where the injury came in. And the people of the township added insult to the injury."

"How?"

"They said the salary was more than I was worth."

And the man in the mackintosh relighted his cigar, smoked on in silence, and the others got still farther to windward of him.—Chicago Tribune.

How Nature Builds Rockeries.

The fact is, the rockery, to be a success, must be an evolution instead of a creation. Attempt to construct one after any set plan and you are sure to fail with it. The most satisfactory one I ever saw was one that made itself, so to speak. The stones of which it was composed were hauled in winter and dumped down carelessly in a great heap. In spring the owner looked them over and came to the conclusion that it would be impossible for him to arrange them in a more picturesque manner, and he had the good sense not to attempt it. He worked earth in between them and planted wild vines and ferns there, and his rockery was a success. If possible, a rockery should be located in a secluded portion of the grounds.

Rockeries as nature makes them are generally in secluded nooks, where all kinds of wild things feel at home, and we should try to carry out as completely as possible the idea of the wildness which prevails in nature's haunts—to domesticate wildness, so to speak. This cannot be done satisfactorily where the grounds are close to the street. If the grounds are too small to allow you to give the rockery a place at some distance from the house, and you feel that you must have one, plant trees or shrubs so as to give it an air of partial seclusion at least.—Eben E. Rexford in Ladies' Home Journal.

Where Harvard Students Come From.

In the academic department of Harvard there are nowadays nearly 1,800 young men. Rather more than half of them come from places so near Cambridge that they can spend their Sundays at home. Pretty nearly half come from Boston and the towns and cities immediately tributary to it. Six or seven hundred come from outside of New England, and of these about 150 or 75 come from New York and its suburbs. New England, outside of eastern Massachusetts, sends the rest.—Edward S. Martin in Scribner's.

Unusual.

A gentleman was limping along Princess street, Edinburgh, one morning, when a friend accosted him:

"Hello!" said he. "What's the matter? Are you lame?"

"Ay, temporarily, temporarily," was the reply. "The fact is, I went hame sober last nicht, and my faithfu' watchdog grippit me by the leg!"—London Answers.

A HEARTFELT REFERENCE

Gov Johnston of Alabama, in His Message to the General Assembly.

In the message of Governor Joseph F. Johnston, to the general assembly of both houses of Alabama, he makes the following reference to the Kearsarge Alabama celebration, which will be read with the greatest appreciation:

I feel that I should do myself and the state an injustice did I not mention in this message the cordial invitation extended to me to take part in the Alabama-Kearsarge ceremonies and the royal welcome accorded to myself and staff and party by the governor and the people of New Hampshire. Such a gracious and generous reception could only come from the hearts of brave people who have obliterated all sectional prejudices and rejoice in the heroic deeds of our fathers and brethren because they were American citizens.

I am sure that this visit will unite Alabama and New Hampshire in friendly bonds and that the affectionate regard that sprang up in our hearts for our hosts struck a responsive chord in theirs.

Respectfully,
JOS. F. JOHNSTON.
Governor.

PEARL STREET CHURCH

Rev. S. P. Moulton preached a strong sermon Friday evening upon "The Uttermost Salvation." A good congregation was present and a deep spirit prevailed. There is such an interest in the meetings that they will be continued next week. On Sunday morning there will be a meeting for prayer at 9 30. At 10.30 the pastor will preach upon the theme, "This Same Jesus shall come." The evening service will be held in the audience room to accommodate people who will want to come. The song service will commence promptly at 7.30, led by the choir. This will be followed by a sermon upon "Breaking an hedge, and bitten by a serpent." All are cordially invited to these meetings.

METHODIST CHURCH.

At the morning service tomorrow the pastor will preach on the subject: "Backsliding." At the evening service beginning at 7.30 o'clock the sermon subject will be "Sin."

The Epworth League is so largely attended and the meetings are so interesting and helpful that more time is necessary. Hence, for the present, they will begin at 6 o'clock instead of 6.15 o'clock, as formerly, and last until 7.15 o'clock, thus giving fifteen minutes intermission before the following service.

HAVEN PARK LIGHTED.

The three incandescent lights provided for Haven park by the city government were turned on for the first time, Friday evening, and the spot is now assured of being fittingly illuminated of nights. It is needless to add that this affords the residents in the vicinity decided pleasure, as it tends to make the park a much more proper resort.

NOTICE.

On and after Nov. 15th, 1900, steamer Alice Howard will make workman's trips between P. K. & Y. landing, Portsmouth and navy yard.

Books each containing 52 tickets may be obtained at the P. K. & Y. office, Portsmouth or from the purser of the boat for $2.10 each; single fares 5 cents each way or 12 single trip tickets for 50 cents.

Those desiring conveyance by the P. K. and Y. street railway will be required to pay the established rates on this line.

The steamer Alice Howard has been chartered by this company to continue the service that has heretofore been performed by the steamer Mystic. This boat is comparatively new, more commodious and in every way better adapted to the needs of the public. The increased expense of operating the Alice Howard compels the company to make this advance in the rates of transportation, but the company trusts that the better accommodations and comforts to its patrons will fully compensate for the increased rates.

I was suffering intensely from pain in the back and lameness in my loins and no one could have made me believe that I would get such immense relief. I had a great deal of trouble with my kidneys At one time I was given up by the physicians who said I was in the last stages of Bright's disease. I recovered but my kidneys have always been in poor shape. I got the first box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Philbrick's pharmacy on Congress street. SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1900.

Hogg, of Texas, kept on insisting that Bryan was elected until the neighbors turned the hose on him.

When Pettigrew organizes his new party he ought to call it the "Amalgated Association of Has-Beens."

Evidently the biggest thing connected with the Spanish-American congress in session in Madrid is its name

One reason why this country isn't doing more business is that there are only twenty-four hours in a day.

Uncle Sam needs more fighters for the navy. If you want to be the man behind the gun here is your chance.

You can't get an "anti-imperialist" to talk politics nowadays for love or money. But it must be admitted that nobody is trying.

This big, fat country of ours is so busy and prosperous that it simply has no time to gloat over the discomfiture of the fellows who tried to betray it.

Crops are a failure in large areas of China, and a famine is threatened. It appears that the inhabitants have been raising too much Cain and two little grain.

Washington reports intimate that Pettigrew will resort to obstructionist tactics, with the hope of forcing an extra session of congress. He evidently wants to see whether the buzz saw is still in motion.

In other words, Statesman Croker will spend a few months in studying the imperial institutions of Great Britain, so as to be ready to adjust himself to them when the pesky republicans set them up in this country.

As a first step toward the reorganization of the democratic party Col. Henry Watterson should feed the Kansas City platform to his famous "horned lion of plutocracy." The morsel might kill the creature, but it would be an immense relief to the party.

Mayor Carter Harrison voices the irritation which every public-spirited person must feel with increasing intensity in the face of the wanton disfigurement of his city by unsightly signs and advertising devices—an irritation that is not lessened by a presentiment of his own helplessness to prevent it by law.

An impressive illustration of the practical communism which underlies the philanthropic undertakings of Andrew Carnegie appears in his latest benefaction to the city of Pittsburg. This project is in the form of a great polytechnic school, with an endowment of $3,000,000 for buildings and equipment, and while the plans have not yet been fully disclosed, it is evident that the founder expects to make the institution the most important of its kind in the world.

Surprise and a vague sense of disquiet will be felt throughout the world at the announcement that the czar of all the Russias has been stricken with the dangerous malady of typhoid fever. The young ruler of the expanding Slav empire has merited the good opinion of civilization by his enlightened and progressive qualities, and his labors in bringing about the international peace conference have made it clear that with all the vast resources of his people behind him he wishes to be known among his brother sovereigns as something better than a mere "war lord." His personality is regarded as a substantial guarantee of the tranquility of Europe and of the far east, and its untimely disappearance from affairs would profoundly affect the serenity of the nations. This is not a time when the succession of a new czar to the throne would be a matter of indifference to the world, whatever might be the equipment which the heir presumptive, the Grand Duke George, would bring to it. It is reassuring to know that the illness of Nicholas promises for the present not to develop the more serious phases of the disease.

A BREEZY TIME.

Fitz and Webster's A Breezy Time Co. will appear at Music hall next Tuesday evening. If you want to go to the theatre to be wrought up and have your nerves set on edge by harrowing and tear-producing situations, you are cautioned to avoid A Breezy Time. It is announced by the management of this piece that it contains absolutely no moral lessons, social satire, or story of contemporaneous human interest. It was not put together for the purpose of elevating the American drama, and it was not calculated to make dramatic critics get out their best set of ethics and rules of construction. The purpose of the piece is to amuse by means of a series of clever specialty performances, devoid of "suggestion" and executed by performers with the very best ability. The piece is, in point of fact, an olio. In it there are lots of pretty girls, catchy music, unctuous comedians and graceful dancers There is a slight story, but it is so unimportant that it is not worth mentioning. The cast is well balanced, each one having been engaged for some particular talent that he or she possesses, but they play together in such a way that the result is harmonious in the extreme, and best of all, very laughable. This comedy fairly scintillates with music, mirth and merriment; has the sweetest songs, jolliest jokes, and happiest of hits; the novelties introduced are the three legged sailor, lawn tennis quintette, dago serenade, frolic of the frog, and a grand cake walk by the entire company.

A GRAND COMBINATION.

Rusco and Holland have outdone all former efforts in the line of consolidated minstrelsy by combining the old popular Nashville students with Gideon's Big Minstrel Carnival, making an aggregation that is a veritable monopolization of mastodonic minstrelsy.

This famous dual alliance which has, each by itself, made thousands laugh in the past and which will, as one, make thousands do likewise in the future, presents the most attractive list of novelties that has ever been offered by any one minstrel company, with more comedians, more singers, more dancers and a better musical organization. The program is replete with new ballads, acts and funny sayings and doings, and the fun runs fast and furious as the screams of delight and volumes of applause testify nightly. The entire bill is devoted to laughing purposes only, with enough ballads and acrobatic work for a relaxation of the muscles after a prolonged spell of merriment. Never before has there been such a stupendous outlay of money made for a like production, both in securing the best available talent and in scenery and costuming. The big daily street parade is emblematic of the mammoth proportions of this organization. At Music hall, Saturday evening, Nov. 24.

AT THE NAVY YARD.

Skilled mechanics are needed in most of the trades.

UNCLE SAM'S FISH.

Interesting Figures Compiled by the United States' Commissioner.

The annual of the United States commissioner of fish and fisheries, George M. Bowers, says the present amount of capital invested in the fisheries of the New England States is $19 637,636, showing a decrease of $437,758 since the commission's last statistical canvass in 1889. This decrease, however, is stated to be only apparent, being caused chiefly by the transfer of the menhaden industry to New York

The New England food fisheries in the aggregate have increased in quantity and decreased only slightly in value. There are 35 445 persons employed in this work and 1427 vessels, valued with their equipment at $4,224,339. The total product is 393,355,570 pounds, worth $9,672 702—the fishery for cod, cusk, haddock, hake and pollock ranking first with a value of $2. 798,109, followed by the oyster fishery of Rhode Island and Connecticut, worth $1,919,681. The lobster fishery is next in commercial importance, being worth $1,276,000. While the catch has fallen from 30,500,000 pounds in 1889 to 14 600,000, the price of lobsters has so far advanced that the value of industry has increased.

The inquiry conducted on Lake Erie in the calendar year of 1899 shows a decided increase in the fisheries of this lake since the last canvass in quantity and value of the product, capital invested and number of persons employed. This is chiefly shown in the catch of white fish and lake herring. The yield of pike perch, though large, is not much greater than in former years. Three thousand, seven hundred and twenty eight persons and one hundred and four vessels are engaged in the industry, representing an investment of $2,719,600 In 1899, 58,379,000 pounds of products were obtained, worth $1,-150,890. A feature of the fisheries is the number of carp which were taken, the catch amounting to over 3,600,000 pounds, valued at $51,400.

On Lake Ontario, where for several years there has been a decided falling off in the commercial fisheries, there was found to be a material improvement, the yield being nearly three as great as in 1897, and it would appear that the effects of the fish culture operations, which have been conducted here are beginning to be felt. The number of persons engaged and the amount of capital invested are also proportionally great. The yield in 1899 amounted to nearly 2,500,000 pounds, valued at over $100,000.

The quantity of fishing products landed at Boston and Gloucester shows an increase of more than 33,000,000 pounds, with an increased value of over $1,200,000. The bulk of the increase is to be credited to Gloucester. The total products landed from American vessels at the two ports amounted to 176,774,101 pounds and were valued at nearly $4,200,000.

Inquiries now in progress along the great lakes and in the Mississippi valley show an increase in the number of carp being caught and shipped mostly to the markets of the larger eastern cities From Lake Erie and the Ohio river and certain of its tributaries the quantity of this species taken is nine times as great as six years ago.

The American fur seal herd continues to decrease in numbers through the continuance of pelagic sealing, and the recent counts show that fewer pups are born.

The total number of fish distributed by the government in the last fiscal year was 1,164,336,754, an increase, principally of shad, cod, flatfish, white fish and lake trout, of about 100,000,000 over the previous year. Owing to the drought in California in 1899 few salmon ascended Battle creek and McCloud river as far as the hatcheries At the Columbia river (Oregon) results were better, though the run of salmon was poor. An attempt will be made to rear all salmon fry to the yearling stage before liberating them.

At Baker Lake, Wash., the propagation of the Sockie and Blueback salmon, perhaps the most important commercially of the Puget Sound salmon, has begun, and over 10,600,000 fry have been hatched and planted there and in the Skagit river.

Very satisfactory results have been attained at the New England stations devoted to the propagation of marine commercial fishes.

A MAMMOTH TRAIN.

It Will Pass Through Portsmouth Soon.

One striking evidence of the country's prosperity and, incidentally, the commercial prosperity of the state of Maine, will be vividly shown when the "State of Maine Worcester Salt Special" leaves Silver Springs, N. Y., November 20th, for its long journey to the Pine Tree state.

At five o'clock in the morning of that day Mayor Robinson of Portland will press a button at his home which will actually pull the throttle of the locomotive standing on the tracks at Silver Springs, N. Y., ready to draw the big train east. Think of it; the mere pressing of a button pulls the throttle of an engine six hundred miles away. A special wire will lead direct from Mr. Robinson's residence to the cab of the engine; there an ingenious contrivance will be arranged whereby the electrical current will pull the throttle as gradually and carefully as though done by an engineer.

To properly commemorate the size and importance of this shipment, which, by the way, is the largest single shipment of salt ever made to one state, the cars will be appropriately decorated, of uniform size and from the Erie railroad's newest rolling stock.

There will be forty cars in the train, the contents consisting of 1,600,000 pounds of Worcester salt. This train will come into New England over the Boston & Maine railroad, Fitchburg division, to Boston, and thence by the Eastern division, Boston & Maine, to Portland.

It is by far the SAFEST and SUREST cure for women suffering from nervousness brought on by female troubles

LYNN, MASS., June 26, 1900.

GENTLEMEN:—I suffered a great many years from inflammation of the bladder and other female troubles. I consulted a physician and took several kinds of medicine, but nothing gave me any relief. I saw Tangin advertised in the Lynn Item, and sent to you for a sample bottle, which I found pleasant to take, and seemed to make me feel good. I got a large bottle, and have taken several since. I pronounce Tangin the best medicine I ever took, and am very enthusiastic in my praises of it. The first bottle seemed to go right to the spot, and it certainly has cured me. I hope all the people I have told about Tangin will get the benefit I did, and I know they will.

Miraculous Cure

"I had been troubled with rheumatism all my life, even when a boy. It attacked me in the legs, arms and shoulders. The pain in the latter was particularly severe. I, of course took medicine for it, but did not obtain permanent relief. One day about three years ago while reading a newspaper, I saw an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and determined to give them a trial. I had taken but three boxes of the pills when the trouble which had been my affliction from childhood, entirely disappeared.

"About a year later, I had another attack of rheumatism which was brought on by working in a damp place. I remembered well what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People had done for me, so I immediately purchased some. Strangely enough just three boxes again cured me, and I have been entirely free from rheumatism ever since. I have told a number of people about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and they have taken them with the most beneficial results

WHAT WOULD YOU GIVE

To be cured of catarrh? If you or your friends have this disease, you know how disagreeable it is. Its symptoms are inflamed eyes, throbbing temples, ringing noises in the ears, headaches, capricious appetite, and constant discharge of mucus. Fortunately its cure is not a question of what you will give, but what you will take. If you will take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great constitutional remedy, which thoroughly purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, you may expect to be completely and permanently cured. The good blood which Hood's Sarsaparilla makes, reaching the delicate passages of the mucous membrane, soothes and rebuilds the tissues and ultimately cures all symptoms of catarrh.

SPORTING NOTES.

Dartmouth vs. Brown, today.

Brown will put up her best team against Dartmouth today.

Yale will make it hot for any student who is found selling tickets to speculators.

The Yale management had to call on Cambridge talent to build up the stands on Yale field.

West Point has gone home, and the coaches are discouraged on account of the number of injured men.

There is some pretty tall bluffing going on by the coaching departments at Yale, Harvard and Princeton.

The fox hounds of Dr. Heffenger are contesting in the national championships at Irvine Depot, Ky., this week.

Quite a crowd of pugilistic admirers will go to Dover, Monday evening, to see the bouts arranged to take place in Lowell's opera house.

The big game of the year in the minds of the Portsmouth sporting fraternity will be next Saturday, between Yale and Harvard at New Haven.

Whether or no Dartmouth defeats Brown at football, a valuable amount of college enthusiasm and loyalty has been aroused by the approach of the game—Concord Monitor.

The Dover High school football team lined up against the New Hampshire college second eleven at Durham, Thursday, and was beaten, 11 to 6, in a 35-minute game. The college team was much the heavier, but was unable to score in the first half.

CROKER'S WAR ON VICE.

Orders Tammany Hall to Stamp Out Corruption.

REFORM COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

Appeal of Isidor Straus Meets Hearty Response From Democratic Organization—Chieftain Angered by Protests of Lieutenants.

New York, Nov. 16.—Richard Croker instituted a crusade yesterday under the auspices of Tammany Hall against vice on the east side. He made a speech, in which the movement was started at a meeting of the executive committee held in the wigwam on Fourteenth street.

Mr. Croker made many forcible statements. He said not one dollar of money had ever gone into his pocket from blackmail levied on disorderly houses, gambling resorts or poolrooms. He declared that any Tammany leader who was accepting money from such sources had better resign, because he was a disgrace to the organization and would be found out and punished.

Mr. Croker announced that he had been charged personally with corrupting the morals of young men and women and that such imputations were false, and he was ready to prove them so.

Mr. Croker became excited when told by Coroner Fitzpatrick that there was no such terrible condition of morals on the east side as had been depicted. This aroused the anger of the Tammany leader. He shook his finger and made threats.

The method which Mr. Croker used to start the crusade was a simple one. He invited Isidor Straus, president of the Educational alliance, to tell of the conditions which exist at the present day in New York. The story unfolded by Mr. Straus was full of local color. He told of the charges which had been made against Tammany Hall as a protector of vice, but he did not say whether he thought they were true or not.

A committee, of which Lewis Nixon, president of the new East river bridge commission, was made chairman, was appointed to stamp out vice and crime in New York. The other members are John J. Scannell, fire commissioner; Michael C. Murphy, president of the health board; John W. Keller, commissioner of charities, and George C. Clausen, president of the department of parks.

These are the men designated by Mr. Croker to carry on the Tammany crusade, and they were publicly charged by him to co-operate with all citizens or organizations in the work.

Mammoth Steamships.

New London, Conn., Nov. 16.—Actual work began this week on the laying of the keels of the mammoth iron steamships to be built at the works of the Eastern Shipbuilding company, Groton, opposite New London, and from this date the work of putting together the hulls of the ships will go rapidly on. The new vessels will be of 20,000 tons register and 33,000 tons displacement, or just 10,000 tons more displacement than the new Atlantic greyhound Deutschland. The new steamers, which are being built primarily for cargo carriers, are not as long as many Atlantic liners, but are much wider and deeper. The following are the principal dimensions of the vessels: Length, 630 feet; beam, 73 feet; depth, 56 feet. They have each five continuous decks extending the whole length of the ship, with three additional partial decks amidships. The carrying capacity of these ships is tremendous, and the holds are such that 28,000 tons of coal can be carried. The dead weight carrying capacity at normal draft is stated as 20,000 tons. Passengers will also be carried, and excellent accommodations are provided for nearly 1,000 passengers in three classes.

Young Woman Burned to Death.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Mary Cozzens, colored, 22 years of age, was burned to death at the home of her parents, 121 Pine street, in this city, last night. The girl, who was a domestic in a private family, went home early in the evening feeling indisposed and retired at 8 o'clock, taking a lamp without a chimney to her room with her. Two hours later a passerby in the street saw flames coming from the girl's bedroom in the attic of the house and aroused her parents. The father ran up stairs and found Mary's bedroom a mass of flames. The girl was horribly burned and was dead. He threw the mattress out of the window. The fire department came and saved the house. The girl was to have been married to a young colored man in about two weeks.

Condition of Senator Davis.

St. Paul, Nov. 16.—The new feature in the case of United States Senator Davis is the slight delirium on first awakening. This indicates the mental as well as physical strain under which the patient is suffering and is a stage of the kidney trouble, which is now the most serious difficulty with which the senator has to contend. The immediate family is prepared for the worst outcome, although hopeful of the possible turn for the better, which seems to appear in any favorable symptoms.

Miss Barton In New Orleans.

New Orleans, Nov. 16.—Miss Clara Barton and party of the Red Cross, who have spent several weeks in Galveston managing the distribution of relief among the storm sufferers, reached here yesterday in a special car. At Atlanta Miss Barton and her staff will stop for some hours to look after Red Cross work there. Miss Barton stood the trip to this city fairly well, though she is much fatigued as a result of her exhausting labors in Galveston.

John W. Yerkes In Washington.

Washington, Nov. 16.—John W. Yerkes, late Republican candidate for governor of Kentucky, has been appointed collector of internal revenue for the Eighth district. He will assume his duties Nov. 20. Mr. Yerkes resigned the office to which he has been reappointed to make his campaign of Kentucky for the governorship. He said here yesterday he had abandoned all idea of contesting Governor Beckham's election.

Miss Louisa Morgan Weds.

New York, Nov. 16.—Miss Louisa Pierpont Morgan and Herbert Livingston Satterlee were married yesterday afternoon at St. George's church on Stuyvesant square, which blossomed like a huge conservatory in honor of the wedding. There was not a spare inch of space in the church, more than 2,500 cards of invitation having been issued.

THE ICE CASE.

Governor Roosevelt Promises a Statement Next Week.

Albany, Nov. 16.—Governor Roosevelt, after waiting since June 2 last to dispose of the ice stock charges made against Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck of New York by two New York reporters, has again delayed action until next week. He promised after the election to announce his decision early this week, but the case seems to be almost as far as ever from settlement.

It was expected that there would be a public hearing on the ice charges at noon yesterday in the executive chamber. J. Noble Hayes of New York, attorney for the newspaper which brought the charges, had telegraphed that he would present the case against the mayor, and many law school students who are just taking up the subject of trusts crowded into the anteroom to hear the discussion.

Mr. Hayes arrived on time, observed the crowd nervously and asked to see the governor privately. He was closeted with the governor for an hour, and then it was announced that the public hearing would not take place, and the law students went away disappointed.

Governor Roosevelt said later he had discussed the matter with Mr. Hayes and had learned positively for the first time that Mr. Hayes represented a New York newspaper. As an attorney Mr. Hayes had promised him a statement of the case on Tuesday next, and the governor said that such additional time had been granted. The governor expects to act without further delay.

"I have had an informal discussion of the case with Mr. Hayes and the attorney general," the governor said, "but as I desire to go over the arguments with particular care I have requested Mr. Hayes to put his statement in writing. Mr. Hayes will submit this statement to me if possible by next Tuesday.

"In view of certain statements that have appeared I shall make public within a day or two a statement of the history of the case so far. This statement will, of course, have nothing to do with the decision of the case itself."

STRONG'S PAPER.

The Total Amount of the Firm's Notes Is $1,067,500.

New York, Nov. 16.—From two members of the advisory committee which is aiding Edward A. Treat, the receiver for the firm of William L. Strong & Co., came a statement yesterday afternoon making denial of the stories that Colonel Strong and F. H. Stott had made a practice of "swapping paper." The typewritten statement handed out by Mr. Treat after an hour's conference with his lawyer, Mr. Van Brunt, and with the advisory committee members reads as follows:

"Mr. Bliss and Mr. Claflin, members of the advisory committee, have stated that an examination of the liabilities of W. L. Strong & Co. seems to show that the total amount of notes drawn by C. H. & F. H. Stott and indorsed by W. L. Strong & Co. amount to $1,060,000. There seem to be no notes of W. L. Strong & Co., except one note of $7,500.

"We are credibly informed that there has been no swapping of paper and that there are no notes drawn by W. L. Strong & Co. and indorsed by C. H. and F. H. Stott.

"There is no mystery or complication in the bookkeeping of the firm of W. L. Strong & Co."

Smith Thompson, receiver for C. H. & F. H. Stott, said yesterday that the story about a dispute over a $100,000 note probably would be found to be a myth. Frank L. Stott further announced that the Stott firm is not on the Strong company's paper for one dollar.

Burglars In Binghamton, N. Y.

Binghamton, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Burglars were busy in Binghamton and vicinity yesterday morning. They left this city and worked their way east on the turnpike, stopping at farmhouses along the route. At Conklin they broke into the barn of Asa Fish, harnessed a horse to a light wagon and drove away. At Charles Bagley's, a few miles beyond, they stole clothing and a couple of checks. At the house of Charles Beardsley Mrs. Beardsley scared them away by telling them there was typhoid fever in the house. It is a case of tall and short man. They conceal the lower part of the face with a handkerchief.

SHE GOT THE CALF.

It Was by a White Lie In Bible Class, but She Won the Prize.

"Speaking of experiences," said a young matron in Brooklyn at an afternoon tea, "I can tell a queer one. When I went from New York to Virginia to teach a public school in a small crossroads town, I found the people very religious and sincere, while, I am afraid, I was neither. I went to church, though, because everybody was expected to go. One of the regular attendants was a sort of half lawyer, half farmer, who was no more religiously inclined than I was, and we became firm friends through our mutual sense of humor. The one church was presided over by a worthy couple. By that I mean that the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Carter, preached, while the Rev. Mrs. Carter did evangelical work in teaching the Bible class. She had an air of omniscience that was delightful, but it irritated my farmer lawyer friend. So one day he came to me and said:

"'I'll give you a calf if you will take down the Rev. Mrs. Carter.'

"'What can you mean?' I said. 'I'm not a wrestler.'

"'Never mind,' he said; 'just join our Sunday school class and take her down.'

"Well, I joined the class. The lesson for the day was the account of the walking of the three men in the fiery furnace. We were treated to a long lecture by our teacher on the beauties of the triumph of faith, and as she stopped for want of breath my farmer friend, who sat behind me, gave me a nudge and said:

"'Now's your time; take her down.'

"I braced up and said:

"'But, Mrs. Carter, haven't you heard the latest scientific teaching about that occurrence? Haven't you heard that it is now believed those three men were complete suits of asbestus?'

"It was not likely that the good woman had ever heard of the substance, but she was not to be caught napping. So she replied:

"'Why—er—yes, I think so.'

"The lesson was brought to a sudden close. The next Sunday we knew that the latest teaching of science had been earnestly discussed by the pastor and his wife, for the Rev. Mr. Carter proceeded to preach a sermon an hour long on the sinfulness of modern science. I got the calf."—New York Sun.

SNOWFLAKES.

The little ones kneel in the twilight gray,
And the trustful prayers that their pure lips say
Flutter toward heaven on shadowy wings,
Where the angels garner the beautiful things.

The wretched earth through her parched lips moans,
And God is grieved at the anguished tones,
While the angels bring to the mercy seat
The little ones' prayers, so pure, so sweet.

With a tender smile he takes them all,
Then down through the darkness the snowflakes fall,
Till the earth lies hushed 'neath a silence white,
Cleansed by the little ones' prayers tonight.

CURIOUS CLOCKS.

Interesting Specimens of Timepieces Which Have Been Made.

The origin of the clock is unknown, but such timepieces were known in Italy as early as the tenth century. Some think they were first invented by the Saracens. From that time many elaborate and whimsical designs were constructed, and those which were skillfully and wonderfully made brought fabulous prices. An old Italian soldier, who served prior to 1689, constructed one of the most curious of these. By its mechanism the figure of a tortoise was made to drop into a plate of water having the hours marked on its rim. The figure would float around and stop at the proper hour, telling the time like "a learned pig." A lizard also was made in the same timekeeper to ascend a pillar on which the hours were marked and point out the time as it advanced. A mouse did the same thing by creeping along an hour marked cornice. The figure of a golden cock that flapped its wings twice with the approach of the hours and crowed twice was also a popular favorite for ancient timekeepers.

Of the various specimens that might be given of early designs of the clockmakers' art not the least interesting are the several types of lamp clocks. One of these was of a kind quite common in the seventeenth century and consisted of a lamp burner placed at the base of a glass oil receptacle mounted vertically upon a suitable standard. The oil reservoir had attached to it a scale, facing the burner and showing the hours, beginning at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at which time the lamp was to be lighted in winter, and ending at 7 o'clock in the morning. The lamp being lighted, the gradually descending level of oil, as combustion proceeded, marked the hours. Another device—of later origin, dating back to the beginning of the present century—utilized the same principle. It consisted of two communicating o.l chambers, superposed by a clock dial. In one of the chambers was placed a night lamp to illuminate this dial, and in the other was suspended a float from a cord which passed around a small pulley. The latter was mounted on a horizontal axis ending in the center of the dial. The float, of course, descended as the oil was consumed, and carried the index hand along with it, thus marking the hours precisely as in the case already cited. At their best, these timepieces could have had only an indifferent degree of accuracy, yet they probably served their purpose well, and certainly are interesting at the present time as illustrating some of the expedients adopted by mechanicians of an earlier period.

The Best Record at Coaching.

In St. Nicholas George B. Smith tells of "General Grant's White Mountain Ride," a coaching trip during which the president was driven from Bethlehem to Profile house in less than an hour by Edward Cox. Mr. Smith says:

In The Century Magazine for November, 1892, Mr. T. Suffern Tailer gave the result of a trial of speed in modern coaching. This journey was in France over roads kept in constant repair by strict enforcement of law, and the trial was under the direction of Mr. James Gordon Bennett, which implies that every possible effort was made to insure quick time. The course was from The Herald office in Paris to Trouville, distant 140 miles. Horses stationed in advance were changed 13 times, and driven, as Mr. Tailer himself shows, unsparingly. Nine people were in the party, and the time made was, for the entire trip, 10 hours and 50 minutes, or a little over 13 miles an hour, including changes, over macadamized French roads, comparatively level.

Contrast this showing of 13 miles in 60 minutes with every advantage and that of 11 miles in 58 minutes over mountain roads in the country, eight horses to be driven, with 16 people to carry, and the reader can easily see which is the greater performance. It is probable that Mr. Cox's achievement has never been excelled, when everything is considered.

General Grant, as he dismounted from his lofty perch, was a curious spectacle. Covered with dust from head to foot, he had the appearance of a man who had been rolled in the road. Hat, hair and whiskers had suffered alike, and, including his clothing, he was all dust color.

The Guns Were Fired.

The late Congressman Holman some years ago was chairman of a committee to investigate alleged Indian abuses. In the course of its journeyings the committee visited Reno. Colonel E. V. Sumner of the Fifth cavalry was in command of the fort, and as the distinguished party entered the inclosure he caused a salute to be fired. The cannon roared, and there was a great demonstration. When the colonel came forward to greet the visitors, Judge Holman said: "Colonel, what is all that cannonading for? What's the occasion of it?" "It is a salute in honor of you gentlemen," explained Colonel Sumner. "Then stop it; stop it right off. It is a useless waste of public money, sir, and I cannot permit it," said the great objector, with alarm depicted on his countenance. "Sorry, Mr. Holman," said the colonel, greatly taken aback, "but those guns have got to be fired off. The regulations require it." The judge grumbled, and declared that it was a scandalous shame to burn up public funds that way.—New York Tribune.

ON AN OSTRICH FARM.

How the Nests Are Made and the Little Chicks Hatched.

In the course of an article on ostrich farming in California contributed to Pearson's Magazine the author, Mr. Edwin Coustom, says:

"After the heavy winter rains a pair will commence making their nest. The cock first sets to work by resting his breastbone on the ground and kicking out the sand behind. When one side is sufficiently deep, he turns round and operates in like manner until a round hole about 8 feet in diameter and about a foot deep is the result. The hen then commences to lay, producing an egg every other day until 12 or 15 are in the nest. In order to protect the embryo from the hot rays of the sun, it will be noticed that a little sand is placed on the top of each egg by the hen. This has possibly given rise to the supposition that an ostrich buries its eggs in the sand and leaves them for the sun to hatch, which is entirely untrue.

As soon as the full number of eggs are laid the couple share the work of hatching. The cock starts about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and remains on the eggs until about 9 o'clock the following morning. Then the hen takes his place. He never fails, however, to relieve his mate for about an hour in the middle of the day while she goes in search of some food and water. A good pair will follow this regime with the greatest regularity for 39 or 40 days, when the chicks may be heard in the shell.

In most cases the chicks can break the shell themselves, but very often the hen can be seen pressing on the egg with her breastbone, and so helping the youngster into the world; sometimes she can be noticed taking hold of the little head and quite roughly shaking the shell off him. When the chicks are taken from the old birds, they are allowed to run on a field of alfalfa (lucern) and kept warm at night in well covered boxes; on the third day they will pick up little pieces of gravel, small stones and broken bones and on the fourth or fifth day will commence picking the green alfalfa, which seems an ideal food for them, as the mortality is very small and their rapidity of growth remarkable—in fact, up to 6 months old they grow at the rate of one foot a month."

WHERE BURGLARS QUAIL.

A Look at the Strong Room of a Great New York Bank.

No little dramatic interest is latent in these huge boxes of heavy masonry, of the dimensions of a large room, with their thousands of interior safes, each with its own locks of various complexity and strength. In a single vault on Broadway there are 15,000 compartments, from a size just sufficient to contain a dozen railroad bonds to the huge caverns of masonry that hold tons upon tons of silver and gold.

The main doors which furnish entrance to the great box are the points on which the utmost mechanical skill is lavished. No burglar would ever think of trying to effect an entrance through the walls. If he disposed of the watchman who tramps around the outside in a little alley between the outer walls of the building and the vault, it would require days to drill sufficient holes to take a solid piece out of the wall. But if a burglar can only overcome the lock of one of the main doors there is the entrance ready made.

These doors are marvelous. One of them weighs 15 tons. They are constructed by welding together layers of different hard metals, sometimes seven distinct kinds, so that if an ingenious burglar finds a way of piercing the first an entirely different problem confronts him at the second, and so on. At any moment his drill is likely to make connections with an electric alarm, which not only raises the guards of that vault, but tells the watchmen of half a dozen others, some a mile away, that trouble is at hand. But even if the lock were overcome the monster doors would not open, because a large section of the stone floor has to be sunk down by an electrical device before the bottom of the doors are above the masonry. Just above each main door appears an ominous looking pipe. It can, in the event of burglarious efforts, belch forth boiling water and steam on the assailants below.—C. D. Lanier in Scribner's.

One Qualification Missing.

"You know nothing about the trials and tribulations of a governess," declared a charming woman of Detroit who is in the business. "I was summarily dismissed from one place because I told a mother that her little daughter had no taste for music. The woman informed me curtly that if I didn't know enough to remedy the defect she could afford to hire some one who did.

"A wealthy lady with three delightful little children dispensed with my services because in playing for company I received more applause than she did. Another rejected my application because I could not understand her German. No one could.

"But an experience last week capped the climax. A gentleman called in answer to my advertisement and asked me to see his wife. He seemed very favorably impressed, and I imagine he must have been indiscreet enough to praise me on reaching home, for she—that is to say—well, nobody would ever call her attractive. When I applied, she catechised me closely as to my accomplishments. After learning with evident regret that I could play, sing, dance and had the conventional manners of the day she started in to disqualify me in the matter of languages. But, in addition to German, French and Italian, I knew enough of the classics to give her children a preparatory course. This worried her, and after a silence she began again:

"'Do you teach Scotch?'

"'I do not, madam.'

"'In that case it is useless to talk further. Scotch novelists are writing such beautiful things now that I insist on having my children taught the language.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Not the Man.

An old negro strolled up to the window of the commissioner of registration in a western city recently and made application for registration papers.

"What is your name?" asked the commissioner.

"George Washington."

"Well, George, are you the man who cut down the cherry tree?"

"No, sah, boss; no, sah, I ain't the man. I ain't done no work fo' nigh on to a yeah."—Washington Post.

James Burke, keeper of White island lighthouse, Mrs. Burke and child, who have been passing a few days in the city, have returned to the island.

The small boy is making preparations for the cold weather by getting his skates sharpened so as to be ready for the first appearance of suitable ice.

"The demand continues steady with values well sustained", is a cable dispatch from Liverpool that tells the story of the apple market in England.

The coal dealers have been wearing a bland smile the last few days, occasioned by the effect the cold weather has had on the amount of coal purchased.

Ex Gov. RaMsdell of New Hampshire lived to do faithful and honorable service to the state, as well as the community in which he lived, and which was always glad to honor him.—Boston Globe.

The traffic department officials of the Boston & Maine railroad are enjoying no sinecures in these days, and the operating department likewise has its hands full.

A special meeting of the United States Daughters of 1812 was held in Legion of Honor hall, Boston, Friday, for the purpose of considering the best ways and means to rebuild the old frigate Constitution.

The new Manchester & Milford branch will be practically completed by Monday, and the laborers who have been at work on that 15-mile New Hampshire road will be transferred to that part of the Fitchburg division where the double tracking work is under way.

At a meeting of the New Hampshire railroad commissioners held in Manchester, favorable action was taken on the proposed consolidation of the Nashua street railway and the Lowell and Suburban. The legislatures of both states had acted upon the matter and left it to the discretion of the Massachusetts and New Hampshire railroad commissioners.

A PERIOD OF EXCITEMENT(?)

What Portsmouth Reporters are up Against at the Present Time.

Portsmouth is about as lively as the scene of Hoyt's A Hole in the Ground. It is so exciting that life is very exhausting and nervous complaints are very frequent, especially among the reporters around the city. Several are expected to suffer prostration if this terrible strain be continued.

If the fire alarm should suddenly sound, probably three or four news hunters would drop dead.

A dog fight would cause such a spasm that palpitation of the heart would result. A police court is such an important occurrence nowadays and the details have to be so carefully elaborated, that brain fatigue always follows and refreshments have to be administered.

The police are so tired that they have locked up the cell room and cob webs are on the framed copy of the tramp law on the cell room wall. It saves a lot of whitewash on the brick work of the interior.

Everybody is at work and minding their own business and the situation when everybody is at work is horrible.

Scandals, accidents, street fights, and elopements are coming so fast that the papers are leaving out advertisements for the space that such important news demands.

Excursion trains will be run into the city to see the next minstrel parade and the enthusiasm is expected to be unbounded. One reporter drank a whole quart of nerve food Friday night. It is an awful thing to live in such an exciting age.

Even out in the country the activity is surprising. The crickets are giving farewell concerts these evenings and the crows are holding end of the season caw parties. The snow birds are also preparing for a festival which will be held soon. All nature seems to enthuse in the tumult of the busy days. Even the little fish are running up the river and make a disturbance along the water front.

Those who were assigned to write the grand descriptions of the fall of the leonids have partially recovered from the great work necessary, including the long vigils of the night that had to be made in lonesomeness.

When will these fearful things be over?

OBITUARY.

George L. Hersey.

George L. Hersey of Dover street died at his home on Friday afternoon at five o'clock, aged about sixty-five years. He had been ill only a few hours. While at his work on the navy yard, where he was employed as a laborer, Mr. Hersey became suddenly very sick in the morning and was taken home in a hack. Dr. Junkins was summoned to attend him. His condition, however, was precarious from the first and he never stood a chance of recovery. Mr. Hersey leaves a large family, one of his sons being Thaddeus L Hersey, the Congress street clothier. He had worked at the navy yard for many years, in different departments. He was a member of the Union Veterans' union, and a respected citizen.

NAVAL OFFICERS JEALOUS.

They Want The Credit Due Admiral Hichborn.

The attempt of some of the bureau chiefs of the navy to rob Rear Admiral Philip Hichborn of his title of chief constructor of the navy will, if the people of this country have their say, meet with defeat. Admiral Hichborn is without exception the most competent assistant that the secretary of the navy has on his staff. He is entitled to as much credit as any man in the country for the new navy, and it is the general opinion that Secretary Long will put a damper on any attempt of the other bureau chiefs, through personal and jealous motives, to snub him or otherwise interfere with him in his good work.

The farmers in this section and the local business men will all hope that they can manage to erect a big plant here.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs William H. Flynn of State street, observed the fourteenth anniversary of her birth by a very pleasant party at her home, on Thursday. From four o'clock in the afternoon until eight o'clock in the evening, about twenty five of her friends were entertained with music, games and a choice supper.

A delightful coincidence was the fact of Mr. Flynn's birthday anniversary falling on the same date, and so two birthday cakes graced the table. Miss Mary received many present in honor of the happy occasion. Among them were a handsome gold ring with a birthday stone, (a topaz,) from Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Baker, and a gold pen and pencil from Ralph and Ethel Pace.

Among those present were the following: Annie Scott, Margaret Long, Annie Jameson, Jessie Jameson, Annie Munderlin, Cecil Preble, Elizabeth Preble, Mattie Horner, Mabel Walker, Ethel Pace, Walter Russell, Harold Gardner, James Scott, Hector Kingsbury, Samuel Whidden, Harry Chamberlin, Ralph Pace, Arthur Lowd, Dennis Long.

Mothers

The editor of the New York Tribune asked Sara Frances Hall, the expert in dietetics, to name the best and most complete food, and she instantly answered:

"A cereal, wheat, when properly cooked, as in Shredded Wheat," and then continuing she said, "Wheat's claim to precedence as a nutritive lies in the fact that it contains the thirteen properties in the equal proportions required by the human system, and in the absence of any ferment, and judging from my own experience no product of cereals can be compared in value with Shredded Wheat."

If you want to know all about Shredded Wheat, drop a postal to The Shredded Wheat Co., Worcester, Mass., for their free, beautifully illustrated book of 150 pages, fact upon fact of health-importance.
